Purpose: You are invited to participate in a videography collective that will serve as a resource for current students and professionals. Your video narrative is intended to share advice that will support all individuals, but women, in particular. The video narratives will be also made public, and will be posted on the Research Coalition for Black Women and Girls in Computing (RBWGC) website. There is no time limit on the validity of this consent/release, nor is there any geographic limitation on where these materials may be distributed.

Procedures: You will participate in a 15-20 minute video session during which you will share any advice or experiential information that you wish to share with anyone pursuing a computer science education or career. Other potential topics that you may like to discuss in your narrative could include:

1. Why did you choose to study computer science?
2. What do you like about computer science?
3. What advice do you have for current computer science students?
4. How does your career utilize computing/computer science?
5. What's your most memorable computer science experience?
6. Who encouraged you to pursue/persist in your CS studies?
7. When did you start thinking about CS as a career?

You can discuss anything with which you're comfortable, particularly positive anecdotes or pointers to resources that have proven helpful to you. This is intended to be a fun experience!

Risks/Discomforts: Your likeness will be recognized by anyone viewing your video. Comments shared in your narrative may also be recognized by others. For example, sharing a potential painful experience, say at a particular institution, could cause some undue stress. While you are encouraged to share any information pertinent to advice or your experiences in computing, sharing negative or uncomfortable experiences is at your discretion.

Benefits: You are invited to participate in a professionally developed videography collective that will serve as a resource for current students and professionals.

Voluntary Participation/Withdrawal: You understand that your participation in this videography is voluntary, granting permission to the rights of your image, likeness and sound of your voice as recorded on video tape. You also understand that your image may be edited, copied, exhibited, published or distributed, and you waive the right to inspect or approve the finished product wherein your likeness appears. Your video narrative will serve as material that may be used in diverse educational settings within an unrestricted geographic area.

Photographic, audio or video recordings may be used for the following purposes:

- conference presentations
- educational presentations or courses
- informational presentations

- on-line educational courses
- educational videos
- promotion of the coalition and/or conference

This release applies to image, audio or video recordings collected as part of the Black Women in Computing Conference, only, and you can, at any time, contact the investigators (listed above) to request that your video be removed from the Research Coalition for Black Women and Girls in Computing website. You also recognize that future removal of your video from the RCBWGC website may not render your video inaccessible via the Internet.

Confidentiality: By signing this consent/release form, you grant permission signifying that your video recordings may be electronically displayed via the Internet or in the public educational setting. You will be consulted about the use of the image stills or video recording for any purpose other than those listed above.

Statement of Consent. By signing this form you acknowledge that you have completely read and fully understand the above consent/release for your video narrative. You have been informed of the risks and benefits involved, and all of your questions have been answered to your satisfaction. Furthermore, any future questions you have will also be answered by an investigator listed above. You voluntarily agree to participate in this videography. You understand that you will also receive a copy of this consent form.
